Email to: damilakou.maria@ac.eap.gr

Maria Damilakou specializes in Latin American History. Her research interests concern the contemporary social, political and cultural history of Latin America as well as inter-American relations. Since 2003, she collaborates with the Hellenic Open University where she teaches History of Latin American countries, in the undergraduate program Hispanic Language and Civilization Studies. She is member of the archive A.P.I.M. (Archivo de Palabras e Imágenes de Mujeres/ Women’s Words and Pictures Archive), which is attached to the Gender Studies Institute of the Faculty of Humanities of the University of Buenos Aires. She is author of books, chapters in collective volumes and articles about immigration, labour history and historiography in Latin America. She has participated in several research projects on immigration and labour history in South American countries. Lately (2020-2022), she was scientific coordinator of the research program “Migration and development strategies in the periphery of the ‘Western World’ during the early Post-World War II period (Greece, Portugal / Brazil, Argentina)".
