

Nikos Daskalothanasis (ndaskalothanasis@asfa.gr) is a professor of modern and contemporary art history at the Department of Theory and History of Art, Athens School of Fine Arts and coordinator at the module The History of Arts in Europe (Module code: EPO20) of the program European Studies: History, Society and Civilisation of the Hellenic Open University. He has published, among others, a book on the historical role of the artist (The artist as a historical subject: From the 19th to the 21st century, Athens, Agra Publications, 2004) and a study on the early formation of art history in Europe (Art history, the birth of a new discipline: from the 19th to the 20th century, Athens, Agra Publications, 2013). He is the editor of the book From minimal to conceptual art: a critical anthology, Athens, Athens School of Fine Arts, 2006. He translated and edited the Greek edition of the collected essays of Clement Greenberg, Art and culture, Athens, Nefeli Publications (the library of art), 2007. In 2021 his book Art History 1945-1975: From Modern to Contemporary Art Painting - Sculpture - Architecture was published (Athens, futura Publications). He is the editor of the Greek peer reviewed academic journal Istoria tis Technis (Art History) (Athens, futura Publications, 2013-) <https://istoriatechnisinfo.wordpress.com/>. His research interests include art historiography as well as art theory and art history from the mid-19th century to the present day.