

Curriculum Vitae

Anneta Tantsi

Adjunct Faculty Member, Hellenic Open University

Master's Program: Didactics of French as a Foreign Language

Subject: Teaching French as a Foreign Language – Curriculum and Teaching Material Design, Development, and Evaluation

Anneta Tantsi holds a degree in French Language and Literature, a Master's degree in Language Didactics, and a Doctorate in Pedagogy. She has substantial teaching experience in French as a foreign language across various educational contexts, both private and public, including primary and secondary education (general and vocational), intercultural school, Institutes of Vocational Training, and Lifelong Learning Centers. She has also taught at the Department of Primary Education of the University of Florina (Introduction to Foreign Language Terminology – French) and at ASPETE (School of Pedagogical and Technological Education), where she taught Teaching Methodology and Didactics. Since 2022, she has been teaching as an Adjunct Faculty Member at the Hellenic Open University in the course "Teaching French as a Foreign Language: Curriculum and Teaching Material Design, Development, and Evaluation."

Her academic and research interests focus on bilingualism, intercultural education, language contact, curriculum and teaching material design, and the integration of new technologies and digital tools in teaching practice.