

A n a s t a s i a K . K a d d a

Teaching assistant/Teaching coordinator/ Public Health and Public Policies⁷⁰ (Sociology of health), Hellenic Open University

Email to: anastasiakadda@patt.gov.gr

She is a sociologist with specialization at the postgraduate, doctoral and postdoctoral levels in the sociology of health, illness, medicine and Healthcare Administration. Her publications focus mainly on the role of the wider social environment in health-illness, the social dimension and social determinants of health and illness, the sociology of health promotion, stress management, the social dimension of infertility, the social utility of e-health services. She is Deputy Head of the Directorate of Public Health and Social Welfare, Western Sector of the Attica Region and academically has over 10 years of teaching experience in the field of Sociology of Health at undergraduate and postgraduate levels in universities and mainly in the Department of Nursing of the National University of Athens. She has over 20 publications in international and Greek journals and a corresponding number of announcements in Greek and international conferences. At the Hellenic Open University, she has been teaching as a teaching assistant and as a supervisor of Diplomatic Theses in the Thematic Units: Management of Health Units⁵¹, Management of Health Unit⁶¹ for over 10 years and during the current academic year she is a teaching assistant and teaching coordinator in the Thematic Unit: Public Health and Public Policies⁷⁰ for which she has prepared the teaching material.

Selected Publications

1. Basic Social and Psychological Determinants of Infertile Couples Health in Greece during the COVID-19 Pandemic
2. The Social Aspects of the Web-Based Social Network Sites: The Greek Case
3. Social Designating Factors of Rheumatic Diseases
4. Social Utility of Personalized E-Health Services: The Study of Home-Based Health Care
5. Sociological and Historical Survey of Childhood Diseases and Child Mortality in the Greek Lands during the 14th-18th Centuries