

Diamantis Mastrogiannakis

Hellenic Open University, School of Social Sciences

Mastrogiannakis.diamantis@ac.eap.gr

Diamantis Mastrogiannakis graduated from the Department of Physical Education and Sport Science at Aristotle University of Thessaloniki. He continued his postgraduate and doctoral studies in France. For several years, he taught at the University of Lille, as well as at universities in Belgium, England, and Greece.

His research interests focus on policies for addressing fan violence, issues of safety and risk management in the context of sporting events, and questions of identity within fan communities.

Selected publications:

Mastrogiannakis D. (2024). Sport, the democratic imaginary, fan violence, and self-management: The perspective of Alain Ehrenberg. Athlitismos kai Koinonikes Epistimes, 2, 85-98.

Mastrogiannakis D., Tzoukas E. (2023). Greek professional football and fan violence: Uncontrolled hooligans or ineffective policies? Athlisi kai Koinonia, 2, pp. 83–92

Mastrogiannakis D. (2022). Field, habitus, and sporting practices: The theoretical and methodological contribution of Pierre Bourdieu to the study of sport. Dokimes: Review of Social Sciences. Panteion University, 25-26, pp.31-45.