

George Chloupis

George Chloupis is a Lecturer at Criminal Law and Criminal Policy at Law School at European University of Cyprus, Attorney at Law at the Supreme Court, Dr. iuris, practicing law since June 1996. He has graduated from the Law School, Aristotle University of Thessaloniki in 1994. He possesses a Willem Pompe Institute Diploma awarded by the University of Utrecht, the Netherlands, in 1997, with the subject "The Internationalisation of Crime and Criminal Justice", with dissertation in matters of international police cooperation: "INTERNATIONAL POLICE CO-OPERATION (INTERPOL – EUROPOL)" as part of the Erasmus Programme, holding an I.K.Y (Institute of State Scholarships) scholarship. He also obtained a Master's Degree in 1997, which was based on a two-year programme, awarded by the Law School of the National and Kapodistrian University of Athens, Department of Penal Sciences, graded "cum laude".

He possesses a doctorate by the Law School of the University of Athens since 2004, with the thesis "Transborder and Supranational Organized Crime and ways of its confrontation". He has a 20-year teaching experience since 1999, participation in Conferences in Greece and abroad, a rich legal bibliography and participation in legislative drafting committees. He has also taken part in scientific studies, conveying the methodology and their findings to the students, while his main professional activity (criminologist) is completely relevant to the subjects he teaches.

He speaks English and Italian.