Angelos Angelopoulos

Assistant Professor, SCM 42, Hellenic Open University

Email to: angelopoulos.angelos@ac.eap.gr

Angelos holds degrees in Economics and Mathematics (University of Piraeus and National Technical University of Greece). His PhD is in the Mathematical Economics Discipline (University of Manchester). His research interests fall into the related areas, in both theoretical and applied domains. He is currently an Assistant Professor at the University of Ioannina, Department of Economics. He has been teaching for 15 years subjects in the field of Mathematics and Economics, at the Hellenic Open University, the University of Manchester, the University of Piraeus, the Athens University of Economics and Business, the National School of Public Administration and Local Government, and (currently) the University of Ioannina. He has presented his work at international conferences, has published his work at international journals, and has participated in monographs. Selected publications:

1. Public Redistributive Policies in General Equilibrium: an Application to Greece, 2022, The Journal of Economic Asymmetries
2. The Distributional Consequences of Rent-Seeking, 2021, Economic Inquiry
3. Value Allocation under Ambiguity, 2015, Economic Theory
4. Urban Economics and Fiscal Policy (book), 2026, Tziolas Publications
5. Introduction to Urban and Geographical Economics (book), 2026, Tziloas Publications
6. Introduction to Economic Growth (book), 2026, Gutenberg Publications